MY BENEVOLENCE DID NOT LAST LONG

I passed a beggar in the street
I didn't know what to do
A few yards on I stopped and thought
To give him a bob or two

He thanked me with a friendly sign
A thumb raised to his stubbled chin
And with a "Thank You Sir" and a wave of his hand
He set off with a cheery grin

I crossed the road and began to think
When I was confronted with a "Sir pardon me,
That if you could spare a copper or tow
I'd be much beholden unto thee"

I stopped again and with a sad sigh Reached into my pocket again I pulled out a coin copper it was Which I quickly slipped into his hand

Not a word did he say as at the coin he looked His conversation ended there and then And left me back where I'd begun Wondering about my fellow men

80 MEMORIES

You remind me of all the good And I've long since forgotten all the bad And so I paint a picture of you every day And sing a song about you every night I look up at the moon
The full it just can't last
I look into your eyes
But cannot see a past

I sing then to the stars
They are so far away
I sing into your eyes
You understand then what I say

That little town that I now know But I really have to go.

I reach up to the sky
It seems so very bright
I read into your eyes
An ever-loving sight

I feel that loving warmth From the sun every day I feel your brightening eyes Wandering down my way

That little town that I now know But I really have to go.

I see that morning come
When light shines all around
I see those caring eyes
I leave without a sound

I'll take my guitar and songs And sing again to you I'll take those giving eyes And send you something new

That little town that I now know But I really have to go.

Sitting at home Alone one day Thinking a lot Nothing to say

T.V. on Deadens my brain Keeps out the sun Brings on the rain

Trying to feel something Trying to forget things too

Can make me feel down sometimes Just forgetting feeling for you

It snowed today
Covered all the ground
Left things white
Painted our little town

Faded away Just like a dream Flowing deep down Like water in a stream

Trying to feel something Trying to forget things too

Can make me feel down sometimes Just forgetting feeling for you

Night came down
Sleep entered my head
Made me seem to want
To head off to bed

All alone one day Sitting safe at home Missing you now Now I'm on my own

Trying to feel something Trying to forget things too

Can make me feel down sometimes Just forgetting feeling for you

When we were almost hand in hand
I photographed your hidden mind
Wondering what simple wonderful things
I would on the negative find

A tree, a river, a trickling stream A wave, a glance, a distant dream A twig, a branch, a darkening sky Or simply YOU just waving goodbye

When we were almost hand in hand
I felt you very near
Wondering what simple wonderful things
I might from you then hear

A rustle of leaves, a rumbling car A whistle, a song, a strummed guitar A word, a sentence, a laughing thought Feeling something that can't be bought

When we were almost hand in hand Watching the wind pass bye Wondering what simple wonderful things We would someday together try

A creeping cloud, a peeping sun A walk, a jog, a slippery run A kite watching us from up in a tree Wanting like us to be always free.

THE WONDER OF LIFE

Listened to life at a bar late last night
Talking and music, clinking and laughter
The later it got the more it got dafter
And life glides on like a smooth flying bird
With the sudden release of a beautiful turd.

Apple trees and bumble bees You'll see there one day Birds with wings and singing springs And then you might say

Life is fine near the Vermont line Learning every day And through the night you can see the light Brightening up the way

Falling leaves from wise-old trees You'll see these things one day Lying on the ground with a rustling sound And then you might say

It is so still climbing that hill On a chilly but clean fresh day From way up there you can stop and stare And then you might say

IT'S TIME TO COME AND SAY HELLO 86

Until I see you I know not when A little while longer And the I'll send

A song to you To let you know It's time for me To come say hello I travelled far I travelled wide To see what I could find Looking for a continent That's only there in the mind

I flew across a big wide sea
And almost found it there
But when I asked her about love
She could only at me stare

Time fluttered past and I spoke again This time on the other side of the sea Big city life we tried but failed To get even a resemblance of we

But then in a nook in sunny Spain We finally made it there And for two weeks in loving splendour We from each other did share

But love like that just cannot last So we went our separate ways Looking for other continents For future happy days.

88 A DRUNK IN A ZOO

I no more know
What I'm doing here
Than an animal lover does
In a Zoo
Surrounding himself
With all those bars.
